best places for fall color

The State Botanical Garden of Georgia

With miles of trails through hardwood forest and along the Middle Oconee River, there are plenty of reds, oranges, and yellows once the leaves turn.

Historic Watson Mill Bridge State Park

About 30 minutes from Athens. You get fall foliage surrounding the historic covered bridge and South Fork Broad River.

Sandy Creek Park

Great if you want fall leaves reflected on the water. You can spend several hours exploring the trails around Lake Chapman.

North Oconee River Greenway

This one is perfect for a fall walk or bike ride.

Parts of the Greenway run beneath a canopy of mature trees and alongside the North Oconee River, so it gets that tunnel-of-fall-color feel

A rustic wooden display of pumpkins and autumn leaves. The scene is set under a wooden roof with exposed beams. Various pumpkins, including orange, white, and green ones, are arranged on wooden crates and shelves. A string of colorful autumn leaves (yellow, orange, red) hangs from the top left. A large metal milk can is visible in the bottom right corner. The text is overlaid on the right side of the image.
